If you don't have a real fireplace, this fake cardboard fireplace is an easy solution to hang stockings when you don't have one of your own. Now that you have your new cardboard fireplace, it's time to make some new cookies for Santa Claus this Christmas Eve. Our favourites are these Melted Snowman, Christmas Blossom or Christmas Tree cookies. False focus to the rescue For the past 9 years, I haven't been able to hang my stockings with care. They were on the wall or on a couch or chair! I was on the phone with my sister the other day, and she was telling me about a fake chimney she had just made of cardboard for a Christmas party at the church. It seemed like such a fun idea! I was so excited and couldn't wait to make my own. Plus, I knew my kids would have so much fun finally having a fireplace to hang their stockings! I now know that it is possible to buy one, but it would simply not be the same. This seriously fake chimney couldn't get any easier. Did I forget to mention that I also roped my husband to help me build it. It only took us a few hours to do, including the time it took for the paint to dry! DIY Fake Cardboard Fireplace Provides How to Make a Fake Cardboard Fireplace Step 1: Tap all 4 18x18 boxes up, leaving an open flap, like this: Step 2: Flip the boxes on their sides and stack them to make the base of the chimney fake and tape the sides and the back seams together like this: Step 3 : Roll 130 of craft paper and start sponge painting your fake bricks. We found that if your sponge is not too saturated, it has given it a more realistic look! The craft paper wasn't big enough to cover my boxes, so I cut 4 or 5 strips that were 7 high. Then I taped them to the largest band of 130 before painting. The tape goes to the back side, so I'm not sure how the paint would fit. I hope it makes sense! Step 4: Once the paint has dried, lie your paper on the boxes and attach it with wrapping tape. The base of your fake chimney is now complete. Step 5: (I totally spaced to take pictures of this part, but it's similar to the first part.) Assemble your two 28x20x5 boxes and glue them together so that the dimensions are 56x20x5. Cover the top and sides with handmade paper. I chose not to paint my fake coat, but you can paint it with mixed paint in black and white, using a cloth to get a marble look, see Family Fun for technique. Then just put your fake coat on the your bricks. Step 6: Put the black cardboard stock down for the chimney floor and cut the red and yellow flames if you want a fire! My sweet husband helped me with the flames. He cut them out and then made a crown shape with them so we could put flameless candles in the middle! I love their appearance! Easier diy Christmas ideas If you already have a fireplace, you could easily do it on a smaller scale for a nursery, or a playhouse! My kids love their fake fireplace! Don't leave us a comment below after finishing your cardboard fireplace and let us know how it turned out. Then line the sides and seams back together. Deploy 130 inches of brown handmade paper. Then start painting on your fake bricks using the sponge. If your craft paper isn't big enough to cover the boxes, cut out a few strips of paper to make sure everything is covered when you're done. Type them on the largest 130 strip before painting. Once the paint has dried, lie your paper on the boxes and attach it with wrapping tape. Assemble your two 28 x 20 x 5 boxes and stick them together so that the dimensions are 56 x 20 x 5. Cover the top and sides with handmade paper. If you want to hurt your coat, you should do it now. Then just put your coat on top of your bricks. Place the black cardboard broth down to the fireplace floor and then cut the red and yellow flames if you want to have a fire inside! One thing was missing... there was nowhere to hang our stockings with care. It needed to be addressed immediately. So I decided to build a fireplace for our apartment! Because, why not really. What you'll need ::Total cost - $18.75- Cardboard boxes (FREE)- Adhesive tape ($7.49) - 2 rolls of Kraft paper ($1.19 each)- Paint :: red brick - white (samples were $3.99 each. I used (2) brick red and white paint remnants at home)- 1 sponge ($1.39)- Rule, scissors and/or box cutter (already had at home) How::1) Measure and draw the height and width you want the sides and coat to be. Collect enough cardboard to cover the work. This can be any size your heart wants.2) measure out the cardboard pieces and cut accordingly. Note:: my boxes were the same size (they came from our recycling room, also known as the free craft room!), so this included a lot of measuring and hashing boxes. Use the tape to secure the cardboard together. To make things easier, it's best to find boxes that are all the same size, so you can just stack them and tape them. I went the hard road!3) install the boxes against the wall as you want to display the fireplace on to make sure the sizes are correct.4) measure and cut the paper to match each side and coat. You just want to wrap around the boxes as you wrap a present.5) ez out the kraft paper and using red sponge and brick paint (I just grabbed paint samples from the hardware store - cheaper route), you're going to make a fake brick design. Remember with bricks, make alternating stains with each row. Note :: As with every DIY comes a few surprises! With this one, I noticed after I finished my brick print that I lined them up badly. My bricks go vertical instead horizontal! This will be the new trend when making fireplaces, I can just see it now!6) Lightly brush your choice of paint for the top coat piece and let them all dry for a bit. Once dry, you will wrap the boxes with kraft paper as you wrap a gift. Using as much duct tape as you please. (I'm a greedy duct cone!) 7) Line them up against the wall and make sure they are in place, then stick them together for stability. Since mine are open at the back, I've placed some heavier things - like change pots - in the bottom to hold the sides firmly in place.8) Decorate your coat and hang your stockings carefully! I hope those of you who don't have the luxury of a fancy brick fireplace can enjoy this fun and easy DIY! If you make one yourself, please send me pictures. I'd love to see them!
